Overview

Will centralized UPS systems continue to dominate data centers?

Some clear trends emerge, notably that centralized UPS systems will likely continue to dominate in data centers with at least 1 megawatt of IT capacity, especially in those owned by enterprises and colocation providers.

Are MV UPS systems too new?

But, as our study shows, sometimes it is simply that an approach is too new, and therefore considered unproven, especially for enterprises and the colocation providers that serve them. Our study suggests that for the foreseeable future — by 2025 — MV UPS systems are unlikely to be used by significantly more operators than today.

Will MV ups be used in 2025?

Our study suggests that for the foreseeable future — by 2025 — MV UPS systems are unlikely to be used by significantly more operators than today. Distributed uninterruptible power systems with batteries will also continue to be favored by only a relative few (mostly cloud operators).

How will ups be deployed in the future?

Perhaps the biggest force of change to how UPS systems will be deployed in the future will be battery technologies — although, as discussed in Distributed UPS with batteries, there is still concern or skepticism over new approaches, such as the use of Li-ion batteries.
