

Energy storage power station outbreak

Overview

Evacuations were lifted Friday night for people near an ongoing fire that erupted Thursday at one of the world's largest battery storage plants in the northern half of California.

Lithium-ion batteries are increasingly being used to store power for electrical grids, but some localities are concerned about fire risks. A large lithium battery energy storage system operated by Key Capture Energy that can power 15,000 homes for two hours during outages or high demand sits.

A few weeks ago, a fire broke out at the Moss Landing Power Plant in California, the world's largest collection of batteries on the grid. Although the flames were extinguished in a few days, the metaphorical smoke is still clearing. Some residents in the area have reported health issues that they.

Video circulating on social media showed smoke and flames erupting from the Moss Landing Power Plant on Thursday night.

The database compiles information about stationary battery energy storage system (BESS) failure incidents. There are two tables in this database: Stationary Energy Storage Failure Incidents - this table tracks utility-scale and commercial and industrial (C&I) failures. Other Storage Failure.
