Are PPA leases a Solar scam?

Many questions are being asked online if PPA leases are a solar scam. These allegedly aggressive and dishonest sales tactics and hard-to-understand PPAs lock consumers into 20-year obligations that are difficult and extremely expensive to escape.

Can you get out of a solar contract in California?

These practices may violate California consumer protection laws and, as a result, homeowners could be entitled to compensation or other relief to help get out of their contract. Do you qualify?

If you live in California and have a solar PPA (not a solar lease) with Sunrun or Vivint Solar, you may be able to pursue mass arbitration and seek relief.

Can I join a class action lawsuit with Vivint Solar?

Unfortunately, no. Except for the very first consumers who signed up with Vivint Solar more than a decade ago, every version of the PPA contains an arbitration agreement and class action waiver. That means any legal dispute must be brought in a private legal action called arbitration and you cannot join with other consumers who have similar claims.
